Characters in "Nervous Conditions"

I've posted a lot about characters in "A Raisin in the Sun" because the characters in that play are so intricate and there is so much we can say about them.

But Nervous Conditions also has amazing and deeply thought out characters.

Think about the male and female characters in "Nervous Conditions". Do you know people in your household or community like them? What about the gender relations? Share your experiences. Studying English is about empathy and sharing and understanding one another.

How does Nhamo's education at the mission affects his personal development and his relationship with his family?

Discuss this and quote from the book. Start with an explanation of who Nhamo is and what his character was like prior to his mission education.

Nhamo is the only son of Jeremiah, who is the only one who can go to school because he is a boy. Babamkuru choose Nhamo to take him to the mission where he will get better education so that he will take good care of Jeremiah's branch like babamkuru himself.
