

Tutorial letter 202/3/2013

Personality Theories PYC2601

Semesters 1 and 2

Department of Psychology

Feedback on Assignment 02.

BAR CODE

CONTENTS

1	INTRODUCTION	2
2	FEEDBACK ON ASSIGNMENT 02	2

Dear Student

1 INTRODUCTION

In this tutorial letter, we will discuss the following:

- Feedback on Assignment 02

2 FEEDBACK ON ASSIGNMENT 02

2.1 General comments on Assignment 02

We were pleased that many students submitted Assignment 02 which was also compulsory for examination admission. The aim of Assignment 02 was to help students to work through the second part of the syllabus. Students who submitted Assignment 02 will receive a computer printout containing the following information:

- (a) The correct answers
- (b) Your own answers and
- (c) The mark you obtained.

If you submitted your assignment on time and have not yet received such a printout, please contact our Assignment Section by email assign@unisa.ac.za or send a sms to 43584. You will find a summary of the correct answers of Assignment 02 in Table 1.

TABLE 1ANSWERS TO ASSIGNMENT 02

QUESTION		ANSWER
ROGERS:	1 2 3 4 5	3 2 2 3 2
FRANKL:	6 7 8 9 10	4 4 3 2 4
AFRICAN PERSPECTIVES:	11 12 13 14 15	1 1 4 4 3

2.2 Feedback on the questions in Assignment 02

Each question will now be discussed. The correct alternative will be identified and an explanation will be provided on why it is correct.

Questions on Roger's theoryQuestion 1

Which one of the following most accurately expresses the phenomenological dimension of Rogers' view of the person?

- (1) Thabo breaks his relationship off with Tracey as she is always limiting his freedom to be who he truly is.
- (2) Gerald values his mother's opinion of him as it provides him with an objective view of himself.
- (3) Lesiba has always wanted to be a teacher ever since he was a young boy and his mother appreciates the view he has of himself.
- (4) Paul's sister subjectively experiences him as a compassionate person, which has strongly influenced Paul's view of their mother as compassionate.

Feedback on Question 1

The correct answer to Question 1 is Alternative 3. The phenomenological dimension highlights individuals' subjective experiences of their worlds and how their view of themselves impacts on their behaviour. Therefore, in order for others/therapists to understand and facilitate individuals towards growth and optimal development, it will be necessary to understand their world from their particular viewpoint. Lesiba subjectively experiences himself as wanting to be a teacher. This view of himself (his self-concept) is what his mother appreciates and accepts. According to Rogers' theory, individuals who receive unconditional positive regard will develop self-concepts that are congruent with their potential and will actualise their potential. Lesiba will, therefore, according to Rogers, become a teacher as his mother has given him unconditional positive regard. It is clear that Alternative 1 has more to do with conditional positive regard which Thabo receives from Tracey than with his subjective experience of himself. Alternative 2 does not fit with Rogers' theory which focuses on a person's subjective experience of him or herself rather than needing an objective view of oneself from others as stated in this alternative. Alternative 4 is also incorrect. What is important in Rogers' theory is a person's subjective experience of him- or herself rather than the experience of oneself from someone else's vantage point.

Question 2

As a young boy, Paul loved building things and taking them apart. As an adult, Paul decided to follow a career in engineering. In terms of Rogers' theory, which one of the following deductions made from this story, is INCORRECT?

- (1) His parents provided him with unconditional positive regard.
- (2) His parents provided him with conditional positive regard.
- (3) His behaviour, to follow a career in engineering, is congruent with his true organismic potential.
- (4) He is actualising his potential by following a career in engineering.

Feedback on Question 2

In this story, Paul's true organismic potential refers to his practical-technical skills (he loves building things and taking them apart). This is also the way he sees himself - his self concept is therefore congruent with his true potential. According to Rogers' theory, a person will actualise his or her potential if that person receives unconditional positive regard from his or her significant others otherwise the need for positive regard tends to override the actualising tendency. It is therefore possible to deduce that Paul received unconditional positive regard from his parents, and not conditional positive regard. He was therefore able to behave in accordance with his self concept and follow a career in engineering which is congruent with his true potential. He actualises his potential. The only alternative which is INCORRECT in terms of this story is Alternative 2, which makes it the correct answer to this question.

Question 3

Alan has entered the stage of the so called 'terrible two's' with the development of his will power leading him to throw tantrums. Which one of the following do you think most accurately reflects the advice that Rogers would give Alan's parents?

- (1) In order to accept Alan you need to accept his behaviour and find another way in which to cope with your own frustration at his tantrums, as opposed to limiting his free expression of self.
- (2) Let Alan know that you understand his feelings that he has the right to feel that way and that you love him no matter what, but that his tantrum behaviour is not acceptable.
- (3) Alan must be allowed to express all of his emotions openly, as only the unlimited expression of all his emotions will enable him to experience a sense of freedom.
- (4) You should show resignation and defeat in response to Alan's tantrums, as only when he sees that you feel powerless to change his behaviour will he begin to feel guilty and start choosing more constructive responses.

Feedback on Question 3

The correct answer is Alternative 2. This response conveys empathy, respect, and unconditional positive regard, while allowing Alan's parents to remain congruent in terms of their own values about what is acceptable and unacceptable behaviour. Alternative 1 is incorrect. Rogers distinguishes between acceptance of the person and acceptance of the behaviour. Children need to feel accepted in a consistent way but specific behaviour can be disapproved of. Alternative 3 is also incorrect. Rogers did not say that unconditional positive regard is to accept anything and everything. Alternative 4 is incorrect as well as it seems that what the parents will convey to the child is conditional rather than unconditional positive regard. It is also doubtful whether a child of two will feel guilty and start choosing more constructive responses.

Question 4

Thandeka has been in corporate banking for the better part of her adult working life. She has been very successful and has advanced more rapidly than many of her colleagues. Despite her achievements, however, she does not feel fulfilled through her work. She feels more drawn to helping people realise their potential and 'workshopping' with them around personal growth issues. Eventually Thandeka takes the leap and resigns from her well-paid position in the banking industry to pursue her dream. While she feels apprehensive and fears some of the consequences of her choice, she also trusts implicitly that this is the right course for her to be taking. Which one of the following statements about the fully functioning person according to Rogers best describes Thandeka?

- (1) Thandeka has gone through the process of growth required in order to realise her full potential and can expect to remain in the static bliss of 'the good life' for the rest of her life.
- (2) Thandeka is functioning fully as she demonstrates the basic characteristic of being more open to society's needs than her own, thereby enabling her to sacrifice her financial success in order to contribute more meaningfully to her community.
- (3) Thandeka felt free to make this choice, as she feels increasingly able to trust her sense of what is right for herself as opposed to depending on existing codes and norms, which may dictate that a secure job is the better option.
- (4) Thandeka demonstrates the characteristic trait of the fully functioning person by being increasingly open to defending against being a conformist. In this manner she has managed to close herself off to certain external experiences in order to remain open to her internal experience of wanting to make this career change.

Feedback on Question 4

The correct answer is Alternative 3. According to Rogers, the fully functioning person is open to experience, lives an increasingly existential lifestyle, demonstrates freedom of choice, an increasing organismic trust, adjusts to changing environments and lives in a creative way, can be trusted to act positively and constructively, and will lead a rich, full life. Thandeka allows all experiences into herself concept and by doing so, has got to know herself better and to acknowledge and use her talents and abilities, choose constructive action and realise her potential. Alternative 1 is incorrect. Rogers is quite emphatic that 'the good life' is not a static state but a process, in which the organism continuously strives to fulfil its potential. Alternative 2 is also incorrect. The emphasis is on the person or organism remaining open to experience and not on being more open to society's needs which could lead to the incorporation of the values of society into a person's self concept which would lead to defensiveness and not openness. Alternative 4 is incorrect. Again, being open to experience rather than closed and defensive, describes Thandeka, a fully functioning person, according to Rogers.

Question 5

Losita believes that she is from another planet and has come to visit the earth in order to save its inhabitants. She tells you that the reason her psychiatrist says she is psychotic is because she speaks in a language that human beings do not have the intellectual capacity to understand, and he is too defensive to admit his own ignorance and so rather regards her as having a mental disability. How would Rogers explain Losita's behaviour?

- (a) Rogers would understand Losita's view of her psychiatrist as defensive, as her psychiatrist would need to protect his self concept against the incongruent experience that he may not be intelligent.
- (b) Rogers would explain Losita's psychosis as arising from a 'defenseless state' in which her incongruities became conscious, with her personality becoming disorganised as a result.
- (c) Rogers would view Losita's behaviour as proof of the malfunctioning that can occur when a person's defense mechanisms no longer function effectively.
- (d) Rogers would regard Losita's behaviour as resulting from the use of denial as a way of dealing with her misconceptions rather than the more effective defense mechanism of distortion.

The correct answer is:

- (1) (a) & (b)
- (2) (b) & (c)
- (3) (c) & (d)
- (4) (b) & (d)

Feedback on Question 5

The correct answer is Alternative 2 containing Statements (b) and (c) that clearly illustrate the severe degree of malfunctioning in Losita, which could be referred to as psychotic. Please note, however, that Rogers was opposed to labels. Statements (a) and (d) are clearly incorrect. Statement (a) is incorrect because the emphasis is on Losita's defenseless state and malfunctioning, and not on her psychiatrist's self concept. Statement (d) is incorrect as both defense mechanisms, denial and distortion, are used to protect the self concept. One is not better than the other. They merely serve different functions.

Questions on Frankl's theory

Question 6

There may have been times in your life that you felt extremely anxious. Virtually all you could think about was how to protect or somehow defend yourself against what you were experiencing. Which of the following statements would fit what Frankl had to say about such situations in the lives of human beings?

- (a) Freedom of choice only operates when we are in situations of relative safety and security.
- (b) The most effective way of dealing with extreme stress is to back away or withdraw from confrontation with the problem or situation causing the stress and to find relieving ways or techniques of coping with it.
- (c) The greatest sense of triumph and joyous relief comes from the realisation that we are not the hapless victim of circumstances but that, even in the worst situations, we still have the freedom to determine what kind of person we are going to be in the face of the stressful situation.
- (d) Like the animal, we as human beings have strong survival instincts which can prompt us, under extreme situations, to act in ways that under other circumstances we will not think of doing (e.g. in securing our own safety at the cost of others; in being deceitful, even in stealing or, at the extreme, plotting the downfall or even killing those whom we feel are a threat to us).

The correct answer is:

- (1) (a) & (b)
- (2) (a) & (d)
- (3) (c)
- (4) (c) & (d)

Feedback on Question 6

Frankl maintained that even under the most adverse circumstances, we still retain the freedom to choose whether we will deal in a moral or immoral way with that which threatens us. Statement (a) is therefore incorrect. The realisation that we are not the hapless victim of circumstances, enables us to face up to and deal with difficult or stressful events in our lives. We will not try to escape the situation but courageously confront it. Statement (b) is therefore incorrect and Statement (c) correct. However, we share survival instincts with the animals which at times can be so predominant that we can act in cruel, thoughtless and destructive ways. We are not compelled to act that way, but can be tempted to do so. Statement (d) is therefore correct. The correct answer is thus Alternative 4 which includes Statements (c) and (d).

Question 7

We live in a world that is highly competitive. It is also a world that sharply distinguishes between the haves and the have not or the achievers and the non-achievers. What ideas have you developed and what beliefs do you hold with regard to your own position in life? Indicate which of these ideas and beliefs correspond to the views of Frankl.

- (a) Success is a measure of your worth as a person. Failure is the experience of the weak and the inadequate.
- (b) Every person should strive to actualise whatever potential and talent he or she has. The highest goal in life is self-actualisation.
- (c) Every person has a destined role to play. The secret is to discover what life requires of us and to do it, no matter what it brings in its wake.
- (d) The law of nature is the law of human society as well: it is the fittest that survive or make it in this world.

The correct answer is:

- (1) (a) & (d)
- (2) (a), (b) & (c)
- (3) (b) & (c)
- (4) (c)

Feedback on Question 7

Frankl maintained that all of life has meaning, even failure. Failure, like suffering, can cause us to realise truths and learn things about ourselves and about life which we may never have done otherwise. Success therefore cannot be seen as the yardstick of a worthwhile or meaningful life. Statement (a) is thus incorrect. Frankl clearly maintained that we best actualise ourselves by not placing the focus on ourselves and on our success or reputations in life, but on a worthy cause that we commit ourselves to. In serving others, we serve ourselves! Statement (b) is therefore also incorrect. Frankl maintained that we have only our own lives to live with its own problems, challenges and opportunities. Often the road we feel destined to travel requires that we choose to realise one rather than the other thing that we are good at. Not all of our talents get realised, only those that serve to let us fulfill our peculiar tasks or destined duties in life. This view of Frankl further highlights the incorrectness of making self-actualisation our focus in life, and is expressed in Statement (c), the correct option. Frankl's concentration camp experiences further illuminated the fact that, even if this was no guarantee of survival, it was not so much the physically fit or hardy individuals that survived, but those with a strong spirit, even if they were physically weak and not so hardy constitutionally. In human society, therefore, the law of the jungle does not prevail, but the exact opposite. The greatness of human society or of human beings is measured not in how physically fit and hardy they are, but in how much they care for the weak and to what extent they commit themselves in alleviating the suffering of others. Statement (d) is therefore incorrect. Since only Statement (c) reflects the view of Frankl, Alternative 4 is the correct answer.

Question 8

How strongly does religion feature in your life? What views do you hold as a result of your religious mind-set? Which of the following views, that may or may not reflect your own views, correspond to the views held by Frankl?

- (a) Religion is a conscious commitment, and only those who have committed themselves in such a conscious way are included in the community of true believers.
- (b) Everyone relates to God or to a Higher Power, whether this relationship is expressed consciously or is unconscious and also whether this relationship is a positive or a negative one (e.g. expresses itself in faith in the existence of God or in a denial of such existence).
- (c) If we are convinced of the truth of our particular religious persuasions, it is our duty to persuade others to believe likewise.
- (d) Unconditional faith in the unconditional meaningfulness of life allows us to say: Yes! To life under all circumstances, even the incomprehensible ones.

The correct answer is:

- (1) (a) & (c)
- (2) (a) & (d)
- (3) (b) & (d)
- (4) (a), (c) & (d)

Feedback on Question 8

Few areas in life are as provocative as those relating to religious views and persuasions. Frankl's views are particularly thought-provoking when applied to religious beliefs and mind-sets. Statement (a), and with it Statement (c), are popular opinions among the religiously devout. The only problem is that there is more than one religion espousing these views, often making for conflict among them! Frankl's dimensional ontology can make for greater religious tolerance. He maintained that just as the human dimension overarches the subhuman or animalistic dimensions, so the Supra-human dimension overarches the human. This means that the Supra-human dimension or God cannot be fully explained in human terms nor be encapsulated within just one belief system at the exclusion of all others. Since faith, to be genuine, must be something personally meaningful and real to the individual person, it makes little sense to condemn others who do not feel exactly the same way we do about ultimate (or religious) issues. Statements (a) and (c) therefore, do not correspond to Frankl's views. Frankl further maintained that at the heart of every human life is a will to meaning, however much this will may have been thwarted or even willfully suppressed. These views are reflected in Statement (b), which, unlike Statements (a) and (c), expresses Frankl's view. Statement (d) is another refreshing view of Frankl, indicating that our faith often transcends the need to have all the answers to everything in life. We can therefore live life the way we feel it should be lived, even if we do not fully understand everything about it! Since Statements (b) and (d) reflect the views of Frankl, Alternative 3 is the correct answer.

Question 9

You may have considered the impact of your childhood experiences on the shaping of your personality and how it still impacts on your present life and your views of the future. Considering Frankl's views on the dynamics of the personality, which of the following statements correctly reflect/s what he believed?

- (a) We are not absolutely free. Our freedom is contained in what we do with the influences we have undergone and the circumstances in which we have been placed.
- (b) Human freedom means that we have the power to disregard the unhappy things we suffered in our formative years and that we can triumph in total victory over it all.
- (c) It is possible that childhood influences could have been so bad, hardships so severe or an illness so devastating, that we experience ourselves as helpless to do anything about it.
- (d) The true view of what it means to be human cannot be found in averages since those who reach full human stature in manifesting what human beings are capable of, are in the minority.

The correct answer is:

- (1) (a) & (c)
- (2) (a), (c) & (d)
- (3) (b)
- (4) (b) & (d)

Feedback on Question 9

It is important to realise that Frankl contended that his illumination of the higher reaches of personality development does not cancel out what transpires on the lower levels of being. He regarded logotherapy as a complement to other types of therapies which deal with physical or organic diseases like schizophrenia, or with the psychodynamic psychotherapies dealing with emotional and social conflict. Frankl maintained that we are not absolutely free and that sometimes, like in schizophrenia or some extreme stress situation, we do indeed experience our wills as not free. It does ask exceptional courage and the grace of circumstances to reach the highest levels of being. Those who reach it, have the responsibility of feeling compassion for, and helping those, who have not or even cannot reach those levels of supreme being. Statement (b) is therefore incorrect while Statements (a), (c) and (d), correct. The correct answer is therefore Alternative 2.

Question 10

What do you long for in your life? What are your prospects for the future? In considering the answer to these questions, which of the following ideas correspond to what Viktor Frankl had to say on these subjects?

- (a) To gain optimum security and a sense of belonging to a group, religion, nation or country which one has designated as one's own, is the foothold we all need to feel optimally happy and satisfied.
- (b) To do your own thing, at your own discretion, time and to your own personal liking, even if it upsets the apple cart, or goes against the grain of what your family, religion or group want of you, is the only way to feel good about yourself.
- (c) The greatest challenge is to live with uncertainty and to realise that you are not the complete master of your own destiny.
- (d) The secret of human fulfilment is to discover where you are needed and to give of yourself even if this, at times, depletes, depresses or exhausts you.

The correct answer is:

- (1) (a)
- (2) (b)
- (3) (b) & (d)
- (4) (c) & (d)

Feedback on Question 10

Frankl contended that the more open and receptive to change we are, the more able to live with uncertainty, the greater our sense of awe at the beauty, wonder and order or meaning of human existence in a world that needs us. It is in a sense of responsibility towards someone or something outside of ourselves and a realisation of being dependent on something greater than ourselves, that a sense of the true worthwhileness of life can be found. In view of this particular life's orientation espoused by Frankl, Statements (a) and (b) are incorrect and Statements (c) and (d) (Alternative 4) correct.

Questions on the African Perspectives

Question 11

Which of the following most accurately explain why an indigenous African psychology did not develop?

- (a) Most of the studies undertaken with African people have been done from a Western-oriented framework, which has resulted in understandings that are not always applicable to African people.
- (b) Mainstream psychology is predominantly a Euro-Americocentric science, which was exported to Africa and the East, with the result that to date a specific personality theory from a purely African perspective has not been developed.
- (c) According to Nsemang most African people have neither heard nor know the meaning of the term psychology? Thereby reducing the likelihood of research on an indigenous African psychology being conducted.
- (d) The theories and methods of psychology are still eurocentric, resulting in its primary focus being on topics that exclude indigenous African knowledge and ways of being.

The correct answer is:

- (1) All of the above
- (2) (a) & (b)
- (3) (b), (c) & (d)
- (4) None of the above

Feedback on Question 11

The correct answer is Alternative 1, all of the above. This style of question is designed to test your theoretical knowledge with the answers being extracted almost verbatim from the prescribed book. Read through the answer to the question posed on pages 529-530 of MMV, which asks: What is the stance of psychology in Africa and why did an indigenous psychology not develop? Can you identify the source of Statements (a), (b), (c) and (d)?

Question 12

Thandi is very ill and goes to see her local doctor. After two weeks she has still not recovered and on the advice of her mother goes to visit the local sangoma. Which one of the following statements most accurately reflects the different understandings of Thandi's illness arrived at by the Western doctor and traditional African sangoma?

- (1) According to the doctor, Thandi is personally responsible for her illness as she eats too much unhealthy food, while the sangoma understood the cause of Thandi's illness as resulting from her neighbour having bewitched her.
- (2) Thandi's doctor believed that the cause of her illness resulted from the stress she was under as her work environment is very competitive. The sangoma agreed with this diagnosis and believed that Thandi did not recover after two weeks because she failed to take the doctor's advice.
- (3) The doctor believed that the cause of Thandi's illness could be explained in terms of her interpersonal dynamics, whereas the sangoma tended to emphasise her intrapsychic dynamics in his causal explanation.
- (4) According to the doctor, Thandi is not personally responsible for her illness or how it has progressed, as she cannot control the germs in the air. The sangoma however viewed Thandi as personally responsible as she must have upset the ancestors in order to develop the type of illness that she did.

Feedback on Question 12

This question tests your ability to understand and accurately apply the factual information in your prescribed book within the context of a story. Hence, information in MMV, about the traditional African worldview and how it differs from a Western worldview, has been drawn from the sections on the meso- and micro-cosmos and applied to Thandi and her illness. Read through these two sections in your prescribed book and ensure that you understand the links between the facts and the story. All of the alternatives express a view on the general belief expressed in the meso-cosmos section of your prescribed book, that the traditional African worldview attributes behaviour to external agents outside of the person, while Western-oriented theories tend to explain behaviour in terms of factors within the person. This general principle is then further coupled with the principles expressed under the section on the micro-cosmos.

Alternative 1 is the most correct answer, as the Western oriented doctor regards Thandi as personally responsible for her illness, while the traditional African sangoma allocates the cause to an external agent. Alternative 2 is incorrect as it downplays the general belief that a difference does exist between the two worldviews. Thus, believing that illness is caused from the stress created in a competitive environment is more in keeping with a Western worldview than a traditional African one, where co-operation would be considered a more natural way of being. Alternative 2 therefore applies the factual information in the schematic comparison of the Western and African worldviews provided under the micro-cosmos section of your prescribed book. Alternative 3 is incorrect as it reflects the facts incorrectly by linking the Western notion of intrapsychic dynamics to the traditional African perspective, while in a similar manner Alternative 4 is incorrect as it links the Western notion of individual responsibility to both the Western and African perspectives.

Question 13

Betty uses a logical approach to plan her work activities and moves systematically through the 10 items she has prioritised, while Veronica prefers to select a task to focus on, in terms of the time of day and her available energy levels. Which one of the following statements about this story's reflection on the cognitive functioning and conception of time favoured by traditional Africans and Westerners is the most correct?

- (1) Betty's logical systematic approach reflects the Western view of time as a mathematical construct and is better than the more haphazard traditional African approach to planning exemplified by Veronica.
- (2) Veronica's approach is more in keeping with the traditional African view of being in time rather than on time' and will ensure a better quality of work output than Betty's Western approach, which forces her to work against her own natural rhythms.
- (3) Betty's logical approach to planning exemplifies the Western preference for intuitive rationality in cognitive functioning, while Veronica's approach may be said to reflect the traditional African preference for pure rationality.
- (4) Betty's logical and systematic approach reflects the Western preference for 'the logic of reason' while Veronica's more intuitive approach better reflects the traditional African preference for the logic of the heart' in cognitive functioning.

Feedback on Question 13

This question tests your ability to integrate your understanding of the different sections of the theory. It is important when you study this chapter to see how the traditional African worldview is reflected in the view of the person, views on cognitive functioning and concept of time, as well as in what is regarded as optimal and pathological functioning. Remember each theory is like a story and has a golden thread running through it. The facts of the theory will be easier to remember and understand once you have grasped this golden thread.

Alternative 4 is the correct answer to this question as it is the one with the most accurate comparisons between Betty's and Veronica's approaches, with the traditional African and Western approaches to cognitive functioning and time. Alternative 3 is similar but has inaccuracies. Can you pinpoint which facts are incorrect? Refer to the relevant sections in MMV. Alternatives 1 and 2 are incorrect as they reflect a judgmental stance, implying that one approach is better than another.

Question 14

Solomon, who holds traditional African beliefs, has recently begun to feel very ill. Within the context of his belief system, which one of the following most accurately explains his understanding of the cause of his ill health and the appropriate medium for healing?

Solomon feels that he is

- (1) Responsible for the cause of his behaviour and is dependent on a sangoma to heal him.
- (2) Responsible for the cause of his behaviour and is dependent on God to heal him.
- (3) Not responsible for the cause of his behaviour and is dependent on a psychiatrist's medication to reverse the power of the spell in his own mind in order to be healed.
- (4) Not responsible for the cause of his behaviour and is dependent on the good will of his ancestors to heal him.

Feedback on Question 14

This question explores your understanding of the traditional African view on health and pathology, combined with the theoretical information detailed under the meso-cosmos section, which explores how the African perspective attributes behaviour to external agents. By applying these understandings to Solomon, we would expect him to view a power outside of himself as responsible for his illness. This eliminates Alternatives 1 and 2 as the correct answer. Alternative 4 completes this correct understanding by linking Solomon's belief regarding causation to the appropriate medium, namely his ancestors. For this reason Alternative 3 is incorrect, as it links Solomon's beliefs regarding causation to the Western medium of psychiatry.

Question 15

Simphiwe is referred to you for psychotherapy. As you are practising within the framework of the traditional African worldview, what would you consider to be an optimal outcome for Simphiwe's therapy?

- (1) Therapy will be successful when Simphiwe is able to function as an autonomous, independent human being.
- (2) Your aim will be to increase his analysis of the circumstances surrounding his mental health difficulties
- (3) The aim of therapy should be to break Simphiwe's withdrawal so that he can draw strength from his collective existence.
- (4) You believe Simphiwe will be cured when his right brain capacity for synchrony and harmony has been increased over his left brain tendency to seek answers for his mental health difficulties.

Feedback on Question 15

This question again requires you to apply your combined theoretical knowledge across a number of sections in the chapter on the African perspectives. Thus under the section on the micro-cosmos you learnt about the different values favoured by the traditional African and Western worldviews. See if you can understand on the basis of Figure 17.2 in this section why Alternative 1 is incorrect, while Alternative 3 is correct. Then the section on cognitive functioning highlights how the Western cognitive preference is for rational processes like analysis, while the traditional African prefers an intuitive approach to cognition. On the basis of this we can understand that Alternative 2 is also incorrect. The theoretical information on the variation in the functioning of the left and right brain hemispheres between Westerners and traditional Africans should clarify why Alternative 4 is incorrect.

2.3 In conclusion

Now that you have read through this tutorial letter containing feedback on the questions in Assignment 02, we hope that you feel even more confident to tackle the multiple-choice questions in Assignment 03. Remember that Assignment 03 is a self assessment assignment and should NOT be submitted. In case you have not noticed yet, feedback on Assignment 03 is provided in Tutorial Letter 101/2013 from pages 60 to 92. The purpose of Assignment 03 is to give you an opportunity to re-visit all the six theories in preparation for the exam. We also hope that the feedback we have provided has clarified the theories for you.

Please note that the information regarding the examination system and the marking policy is provided in Tutorial Letter 101/2013 pages 23 to 24. You are also reminded that the examination paper will be 2 hours long and will comprise 60 multiple-choice questions on all six prescribed theories, with 10 questions from each theory.

We wish you everything of the best

YOUR LECTURERS FOR PERSONALITY THEORIES