BAR CODE

ENGLISH: ASSIGNMENT 10

Question 1

- (a) Folktales are meant for children only. The adult female/grandmother is the one who will narrate the story to the young ones. Folk tales are educational as they teach morals to children. They encourage the children to listen carefully. They also teach the narrating and singing skills. Children learn to gather new vocabulary and learn about their environment. (Any other answer that is relevant will be accepted). (6)
- (b) Value of riddles : children's vocabulary increase through playing riddling games
They learn about their environment.
They learn to think quickly and accurately.
They learn to listen attentively.
They also learn to pronounce and speak their language properly especially in long riddles as they present their answers.
Students need to write 3 riddles in their African languages. (3)
- (c) Short story: The title/topic has to be attractive. The theme to be compressed and all activities and events to take place within a specified time. Structure: introduction has to have the main character and the problem he/she is faced with. In the introduction the place should be indicated. The body should deal with only one event/activity. The conclusion should be short and should have an element of the twist in the tail.

(Students should use a known short story that is prescribed in their own language.)

(25)

Question 2

The student should choose a drama book/ novel and indicate the way female characters are depicted (in a negative manner). The drama/novel should be the ones that are prescribed and recommended). The students who will receive high marks, is the one who has supported her/his arguments correctly. For instance in Mbala Ngubaba: PB Skhosana, NaMtshweni is depicted as an ignorant woman who did not even know that her husband had a will. She is always submissive and she agrees to whatever is said by the law. The wife to Mavela, does not have a say, she complies at all times. They relocated from Soshanguve to their in-laws' place, her husband told her that he got a new job and he is leaving, she never questioned him as to where and when will he be back.

(25)

Question 3

Theme is regarded as the subject matter under discussion and is the main idea conveyed by the poet. The theme in poetry may be on any subject of any kind, and any human experience, love, death, birth, disease, etc. (5)

- (a) A narrative poem has a beginning, middle, a climax and a conclusion. One type of a narrative is the epic. (2) a lyric does not tell a story, but expresses deep personal emotions and takes different forms. (2)
- (b) Four types of stanzas. Poetry is written in lines. Couplet or two lines; three lines or triplet, four lines or quatrain, five lines or quintain, six lines or sestet, eight lines or octet and a sonnet of fourteen lines. (8)
- (c) Repetition occurs when whole words or parts of words are repeated in a poem. Repetition gives the outward structure of a poem a certain pattern, but also creates a very pleasing variation and rhythm. Repetition draws the reader's attention to certain words and images. Repetition reinforces the meaning. In parallelism similar or contrasting ideas are paralleled by using similar words or constructions in successive lines. Cross parallelism or chiasmus, partial repetition and antithetical parallelism. (Students have to give examples.) (8)

Question 4

- (a) Children associate themselves with animal characters because they are wise/intelligent or fast. A hare or trickster is witty; he/she deceived an old lady. They played a dangerous game. The old lady died. A lion is powerful. It is the king of the jungle. A bee is also intelligent. It comes with its tricks when other animals are in danger. (Students have to support their arguments with relevant and suitable examples.) (6)
- (b) Picture books: Alphabet books stimulate vocabulary development in children; Counting books are used to teach the young ones how to count. Concept books are used to teach children to name, to identify and to understand the meaning of some basic and necessary words or terminology. These include concepts like colour, full or empty, inside or outside. Wordless books give the learners the opportunity to interpret pictures and to follow the story in a chronological order. (6)
- (c) It depends. If children grew up watching the spider man on TV, they will definitely associate themselves with him. But if they grew up listening to the folktales narrated by their grandmother, they will associate themselves with the Rabbit. The rabbit is witty in African language context and also spider man is clever. (Students should support their answers with relevant examples.) (6)
